In the years of 1864 and 1865
while the war was at its height,
I was engaged, with a friend,
in teaching, reading, and writing, arithmetic, &c. to the soldiers who had lost a limb or an arm, numbering in all about four hundred, during that time. as a token of their appreciation, on Washington's birthday, they presented each of us with a photograph album containing their pictures.

Presented, by the scholars of the Broad and Cherry School, as a testimonial of their respect and esteem
March 22nd 1865

In the sweet remembrance of a friend,
Whose absence we do oft regret,
Forever fondly dwell, and know us and Until the sun of life shall set.

LEVY & COHEN'S

VIEWS OF THE REBEL CAPITAL AND ITS ENVIRONS.

DRURY'S BLUFF.

The Fortifications upon these heights up to the time of the evacuation of Richmond, were of the most formidable character, and effectually barred all approach by water to the City of Richmond.

A fine view is here given of those obstructions now remaining in the stream.
